

Up until a few years ago I have always felt secure in the American system of politics and felt that the people had control. However, today I am very worried that corporate interest has gained the upper hand. Nowhere else is this corporate control more troubling than in the media. I feel that the PUBLIC airwaves should not be used to further corporate interests. I feel it goes to the very heart of the greatness of America to allow the use of our public airwaves to influence the political process. If the FCC can not stop Sinclair from their attempt to deceive voters using the public airwaves we need a new FCC and rules that govern it. To allow this sort of use of the public's airwaves is profoundly unamerican. Those who enjoy the privilege of using the public airwaves must serve the public's interest. One-sided programs, like "Stolen Honor", do not serve the public interest and are harmful to our democracy. Thank you.
